

Kaka Retreat - New Zealand

Kaka Retreat's boutique accommodation complex is nestled amongst beautiful native bush on Stewart Island's idyllic Halfmoon Bay. Guests can appreciate the peace and tranquillity of a truly magnificent setting where silence is broken only by the calls of native birds such as the property's namesake, the cheeky Kaka – New Zealand's forest parrot.

Kaka Retreat is a year-round paradise for birdwatchers, photographers, or those just seeking peace and quiet on the southernmost island of New Zealand. The four-star accommodation comprises five spacious superior suites and two cottages, sleeping up to two and three persons respectively.

Modern conveniences include flat-screen LCD televisions, deluxe beds and a kitchenette with convection microwave and fridge. Every comfort has been attended to with all suites complete with linen, sumptuous wool duvets and customer-controlled central heating.

Breakfast is served with a smile each morning before guests head out to explore the rugged terrain that is made of some of the oldest rock in New Zealand. There are beaches of black iron sand and sparkling gold shades to marvel at, plus boating and fishing on Paterson Inlet. A waterfront stroll as the sun sets is the perfect end to a day exploring Rakiura National Park, then let sensor lighting guide you back to your cosy abode.

To keep the peace, the retreat offers a courtesy phone at reception and there is wireless Internet to connect you with the rest of the world.

Experienced hosts pick up and return guests to and from the airport and ferry terminals in a courtesy coach and can assist with travel advice.
